  - Demonstrate techniques for empowering clients using the strengths approach
  - Demonstrate the use of short-term counselling strategies (exceptions to the problem, miracle questions, focus on solution, use of change language, scaling techniques).
- 6. Working with Difficult Clients
  - Identify strategies for conflict resolution.
  - Identify strategies for working with angry and potentially violent clients.
- N: Course Content: The following global ideas guide the design and delivery of this course:
  - Effective counsellors need to develop multi-cultural competence that enables them to understand their clients' behaviour and worldview. At the same time, they must understand their own cultural and worldview and how this influences their assumptions and responses.
  - Knowledge of the limits of one's competence is fundamental to professional practice.
  - Self-awareness regarding one's personal style, values, effect on others, skills, and the influence of experiences, are essential prerequisites for skilled communication and counselling.
  - Skill is necessary but insufficient for competent practice. Technical proficiency must be balanced with a caring attitude, acceptance of a side range of behaviour and cultures, and respect for the rights of others, including their right to self-determination.
  - Effective counsellors are able to draw from a wide range of skills customized to fit the needs of individual clients and situations as opposed to a "one-size fits all" approach.
  - Effective counselling of clients with co-occurring disorders requires integration of psychiatric and substance abuse interventions rather than relying on the traditional approach of treating each disorder separately.
