Major Concepts: global ideas that guide the design and delivery of the course

1. CSSW practitioners work in a variety of settings involving individuals, groups, families, community work, advocacy, and program development.
2. Practitioners maximize their effectiveness by developing a wide range of skills for individual, situational and cultural contexts.
3. Technical and theoretical knowledge related to one's field of practice is an essential component of effective practice.
4. Skill and technical proficiency, however, must be balanced with a caring attitude, acceptance of a wide range of behaviour and cultures, and respect for the rights of others including their right to self-determination.
5. Effective counsellors have the ability to use a skill, as well as the self-restraint "not" to use it. Effective counsellors know how, when and why a given skill is used, and they have assertiveness, understanding, creativity and sensitivity to use it when appropriate.
6. Practicum settings create opportunities for practitioners to observe, learn from experience, synthesize personal and classroom experiences, examine assumptions and explore creative modes of inquiry that are not available in classroom settings.
7. Practitioners who incorporate self-evaluation and who facilitate feedback on their performance from clients, colleagues and supervisors are able to set goals for their ongoing professional development.

Evaluation:

Selection of evaluation and assessment tools for this course will be based on:

1. Adherence to college evaluation policy regarding number and weighting of evaluations, i.e. a course of three credits or more should include at least five separate evaluations
2. A combination of evaluation instruments that includes opportunities for students to demonstrate different ways of knowing. i.e. oral, individual, group, narrative, research
3. A developmental approach to evaluation that is sequenced and progressive.
4. Evaluation being used as a teaching and learning tool for both students and instructors.
5. Commitment to student participation in evaluation through such processes such as self and peer evaluation, participation in instrument design and program/instructor evaluation.
